THIRTEEN-CENT STAMP

Postmaster-General Payne, Edwin C Madden, the third assistant postmaster general, and Major Reeve, chief of the stamp division of the Post Office Department, have decided on a new stamp, particularly designed for the foreign mail service. It is to be of a de tion new to the postal service—thirteer cents. At present it is impossible to end a registered letter through the for eign mails without using two stamps, one of five cents to pay the postage and one of eight cents to pay the cost of registration. When the thirteen-cent stamp is on sale this will, of course, be obviated by the use of one stamp. The design of the stamp provides for a portrait of President Harrison, and Mr. Madden and Major Reeve Monday decided on the portrait from which the stamp is to be m It is an excellent likeness and one of the clearest prints which could possibly be obtained. Mr. Harrison is shown seate at his desk in the Executive Mansion with his face turned a little to the left from the camera. The portrait is said to have been a favorite with both President and Mrs. Harrison.

But Molly persuaded me to hold on a little longer.

Now, before I come to the particular point of this yarn, I want to tell you a little about this line. I have said it was a single track one, running from Junction City to Georgetoyn. The latter place was a little town of 500 or 600 inhabitants; but in summer a great many people was a little town of 500 or 600 inhabitants; but in summer a great many people.

However, luck was with us that night, and we pulled up at Junction City at loving the things which live and grow to upon it. He should study the growth of his crops so he can tell how to till and fertilize his soil for their proper nourish. ment. He should by his own observation find out the good and evil done by the birds and insects. He should study the growth of his trees, so he can properly manage his woodlands, and plant them by his dwelling, where the music of their leaves will give him help and silling test to proper hourish.
